DAYTON, O., Nov. --Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R.-Mo.) will keynote the University of Dayton's fourth Institute on Federal Taxation here Dec. 16, it was announced.

Mr. Curtis, of Missouri's second district, will be making his second appearance at the Dayton seminar. A member of the House Ways and Means committee and the Joint Economic committee, he was also keynoter at the program two years ago.

The one-day institute is designed as a regional forum for accountants, attorneys, and corporate tax officers for an airing of practical problems, current issues, and recent developments in the federal tax field.

Among topics to be discussed are these:

"Current Developments in Depreciation," by R. J. Englert, a Cincinnati accountant;

"Reimbursed Expenses," by James A. Scott, Cleveland attorney;

"Tax Planning in Real Estate Transactions," by Albert E. Arent, Washington attorney;

"Practical Tax Problems in Corporate Acquisitions of Assets through Stock Purchases," by Robert G. Skinner, Cleveland accountant;

"Year-End Tax Planning," by Keith A. Cunningham, Detroit accountant;

"Deferred Compensation," by Donald C. Alexander, Cincinnati attorney;

"Seller's Problems in Disposing of a Corporate Business," by Merle H. Miller, Indianapolis attorney.

Mr. Curtis, who resides in Webster Groves, Mo., is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Washington University Law School. He is in his fifth two-year term in the House of Representatives and is the ranking Republican member of the Joint Economic Committee. He is one of four senior Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee.
